SHANGHAI, Nov. 10.—(INS)—Terrifying thousands of Chinese refugees and foreigners in the International Settlement and French concession, Japanese forces launched a smashing attack against 10,000 Chinese soldiers trapped in Nantao today.

Shells screamed across the French concession and Settlement for hours as the Japanese, with artillery and tanks, pounded the beleaguered "lost battalion."

Planes, hurling down tons of explosives, also took part in the attack, which ended suddenly at 3:15 p. m.

From a window in a house overlooking Shanghai's old city, I watched the destruction of Nantao.

I saw Japanese batteries, located in Jessfield Park west of the Settlement, firing directly over the heart of the Settlement and French concession during the attack on Nantao.

The attack caused a near panic among thousands of Chinese residents and refugees in the foreign areas as well as among foreigners, who remembered the slaughter in the Settlement on "bloody Saturday" early in the Shanghai battle.

Later I got a message through to the commander of the Chinese troops in the beleaguered district. I asked him how he was faring.

In words that sounded strange from an Oriental militarist, he replied: "Let 'em come. We can take it!"

Japanese aerial bombers rained high explosives upon the ruined section, while an observation plane directed the invaders' artillery fire. The attack began after an extensive aerial reconnaissance.

Since Nantao adjoins the French concession, French authorities were especially worried for the safety of their region.

As a result, a detachment of Marines landed in full war kit from the French flagship La Motte Picquet to strengthen the French defenses bordering Nantao.

Before the attack started Japanese authorities warned non-combatants to evacuate Nantao before the drive against the 10,000 "face savers"—left behind following the general Chinese retreat to the West—got underway.

The Japanese announcement said their army and navy planned to begin "mopping up operations."

Nipponese officials promised, however, they would not attack the French water works, the Kinsing docks or the residence of the Little Sisters of the Poor. Civilians who attempted to enter Nantao to rescue the Sisters were turned back by French authorities.

At one time, during the subsequent attack, a Japanese airplane bombed a Chinese position of the east bank of Zahwei Creek, only 100 yards from the boundary of the French concession.

Thirty-Five New Members
Join Loyal Republican Club

BUCKINGHAM, Nov. 10.—With 35 new members added to the rapidly growing organization, and with the club headquarters packed to capacity, another enthusiastic meeting of the Loyal Republican Club of Bucks County was held here Monday night.

Plans were completed for a Christmas party to be staged at the Tryo Hall Grange building on Monday night, December 13, for members of the club and their families. The children, particularly, will be welcomed, for they will be personally greeted by Santa Claus, who expects to make his first appearance in this community, at the December 13 meeting.

Harris Holmes, of Doylestown, was appointed chairman of the Christmas committee, and Dr. R. C. Magill, of New Hope, chairman of a minstrel show committee to make plans for a show to be presented early next year.

All of the Republican county candidates elected at the November election were present at last night's meeting. They expressed their deep appreciation for the fine campaign work carried out in detail by the members of the Loyal Republican Club which helped to a great extent to give all candidates a fine majority over their Democratic opponents.

Parents Visit Evening
Public School Classes

In observance of Education Week, parents of Bristol public school children in grades eight to 12, availed themselves of the privilege of witnessing classes last evening, when regular sessions were conducted at the Bristol high school between the hours of 7:30 and nine.

Classes which correspond to those of a normal school day were conducted, the two classes sponsored being of 45 minutes duration each.

Between 300 and 400 parents, and other visitors, took advantage of this opportunity to witness class-work of the boys and girls in the upper five grades. The sessions commenced at 7:30, immediately following music by the high school orchestra in the auditorium. The parents visited classrooms in which their interest centered, and many took the opportunity to witness several classes for a few minutes each.

The purpose of National Education Week is to afford an opportunity of bringing the parents and teachers together, and of focussing attention on the importance of education. Each year in Bristol schools one night is devoted to evening classes so that fathers and mothers might witness actual class-room operations.

A similar program will be followed in the elementary grades during this week, when open house will be observed in all class-rooms, other than grades eight to 12, on Friday afternoon. From 1:30 o'clock on, parents and others interested, may visit these class-rooms, and watch the children at work. They are invited to enter the classrooms and watch the teachers direct the boys and girls in their lessons and recitations.

Special art posters have been prepared for this week, and the theme for each day has been observed from the first to 12th grades in all schools.

POLITICAL DYNAMITE
IN SPECIAL SESSIONS

Administrations Wrecked and Parties Split in the Past,
Record Shows

TO MEET NOVEMBER 15 LIST IS GIVEN

By William S. Neal
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—(INS)—If history repeats itself, momentous happenings may flow from the special session of Congress which convenes on November 15 at the call of President Roosevelt.

Administrations have been wrecked, parties have been split and war has been declared in special sessions of Congress in the nation's span of years.

A special session, all congressional students agree, hovers on political dynamite. Why this is so is the subject of argument, but the past reveals clearly how quickly quarrels develop.

Presidents frequently thrust momentous issues before special sessions, members of Congress often return chagrined at being forced to leave their homes, and the pressure of regular business usually is absent so that members can devote their whole energies to a few major issues. And all major issues usually create political cleavage.

In his book published 53 years ago, James G. Blaine warned of the calling of special sessions of Congress. He said:

"It was remembered that all the woes of the elder Adams' administration, all the intrigues which the choler President fancied that Hamilton was carrying on against him in connection with our French difficulties,"

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Copyright, 1937, by The Baltimore Sun)

A Test For The President

SOME OF THE more astute political observers believe that fairly early in the session of Congress to convene next week there will be an opportunity to judge Mr. Roosevelt's attitude toward the 1940 Presidential nomination. They hold that the extent and degree to which he exerts himself to make good on his most recent and apparently very earnest declarations concern-

Inter-County Meeting
Held By Rotarians

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 10.—More than 125 Rotarians from the five clubs in Bucks County gathered at the Doylestown Inn last evening for the second annual inter-county meeting. The Doylestown Club acted as the host. Besides members from the Doylestown club, other clubs represented were Bristol, Quakertown, Perkasie and Morrisville.

The Rev. J. Steinmetz, rector, St. Paul's Church, Elkins Park, Pa., was the featured speaker of the evening. Rev. Steinmetz took as his subject, "The Philosophy of Life," pointing out those attitudes which go to make up the right philosophy as against those attitudes which make the wrong philosophy.

The annual singing contest, won last year by the Morrisville Rotary Club, but which this year did not enter, was won by the Bristol club. The selection used by the Bristol club was the song "Come To the Church in the Wildwood," appropriate Rotary words being substituted, however, for the original words by Ernest Gamble. A quartet composed of the Rev. James R. Gailey, E. Leslie Helwig, Otto Grupp and Ernest Gamble sang the verses to the song and were accompanied by other Bristol members on the chorus. Sam Shire was the accompanist and Lester D. Thorne played the violin obligato. The prize which was presented to the Bristol club was a silver flower vase.

President Walter Irvine of the Doylestown group presided at the meeting. For the dinner which preceded the speaker and singing contest each table was decorated with flowers and buttonhole roses were distributed to members by Jacob Schmidt, Bristol Rotarian. A birthday present was given to Wesley Bunting, Esq., Doylestown.

Remarks were made by Dr. J. Fred Wagner, chairman of the inter-county committee. Raymond Johnson, Morrisville, was elected general chairman of the inter-county meeting for next year. Club singing was led by Ernest Gamble, Bristol Rotarian.

The Rev. Steinmetz's talk was interspersed with good humor and pleasant illustrations. The wrong attitudes for a philosophy of life include those which hold that a man should live solely to make money, that he should consider his life one big vacation, and that he should feel as if he is merely doing time until he passes on.

"These attitudes, or ideas of life, are bound to produce evil and should be avoided," the speaker pointed out.

"Those attitudes which will make for a happy philosophy of life include the feeling of service to others, of fellowship, of considering life as an art in itself, by having a sense of humor, a sense of value, and desire to work, as well as a sense of time and technique."

"AMERICAN YOUTH PROBLEM"

By Naomi Davidson
Modern conditions have given rise to very aggressive youth movements. Some of these movements, such as in Russia, Germany, and Italy, have been undesirable when considered from a standpoint of Christian democracy.

In America there has been no such distinct organization of youth. Nevertheless, the unsettled conditions of our economic and political life have caused the youth of our country to be greatly confused and greatly handicapped.

RED CROSS HAS AIDED
DISABLED WAR "VETS"

Acts As Sympathetic Intermediary and Court of Human Assistance and Appeal

NOT BY VOLUNTEERS

For many years the home service section of the Southeastern Pennsylvania chapter of the Red Cross has acted in the capacity of sympathetic intermediary and a court of human assistance and appeal to thousands of invalid and disabled war veterans by securing for them deserved compensation and rehabilitating their families.

The Home Service work is social service and family case work of a highly specialized type. It is one phase of Red Cross work that is not done by volunteers. Because of the delicate nature of this work and to accomplish the best results in mental and social rehabilitation, it is necessary that the persons engaged have extensive training in psychology, tact and sympathetic understanding of human problems. Therefore, only people with social service training are qualified for the work.

Mrs. Marie L. Holland is the home service worker in Bristol, with headquarters at the Robert W. Bracken American Legion Post, 619 Radcliffe street. She is there every Wednesday afternoon from two to three.

Mrs. Holland's work consists of family case work for disabled veterans and their families, families of deceased veterans, and dependents of men in Peace Time Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard.

Originally, the Home Service section was established to aid the families of soldiers and sailors in the World War. When these men returned, some of them wounded, others with Paul V. Forster, vice-chairman of the Lower Bucks District Board of the Bucks County Scouting Council, became the new District Chairman during the election of officers at the quarterly meeting last evening at the Keystone Hotel. He has given many hours to Scouting Service as a district officer, and as a member of the Executive Board. First Chairman is Dr. J. J. Willaman, and Second Vice-Chairman, Frederick Lennig, Jr.

The devoted service of retiring District Chairman Walter W. Pitzonka was recognized by the remarks of Neighborhood Commissioner William Wainman, Croydon. Mr. Wainman said, "Our hats go off to the fine leadership given to all of us in Lower Bucks by Walt Pitzonka. He has been faithful, and dependable at all times. No service for Scouting has been too great for him to do. We are happy that he is continuing his Scouting relationship by being Chairman of the Council Training Committee. We need more men like Walt. Our new chairman, Paul Forster, will have our loyalty in taking over the leadership so capably carried forward by Walter W. Pitzonka." The entire board indicated their agreement by a hearty round of applause.

Several new men were introduced to the District Board. They included Skipper Edgar W. Hill of the Seascout Ship "The Rainbow Clipper," Croydon; Chairman of the Croydon Cub Pack John E. Wolf, and Scoutmaster Clyde Nash of Edgely. Skipper Fred R. The Seascout membership in Bristol is now seventeen, with new applicants every week. The Croydon Ship "The Rainbow Clipper," Skipper Hill, and the Andalusia Ship "The Wasp," Skipper Raymond Vickers, are taking in new members and contacting young men to interest them in seascouting.

There is a new Troop being organized among the Italian boys of Bristol by Neighborhood Commissioner John Fields. District Commissioner Herbert A. Pettit and Scout Executive William F. Livermore have met with Mr. Fields to arrange for the organization of the Troop. Eddington will soon have a Scout Troop through the efforts of Neighborhood Commissioner William Wainman. An effort is being made at Edgely to organize a Cub Pack by Neighborhood Commissioner Ronald Swain. 28,140 AUTO DEATHS

Records of the National Safety Council show that 28,140 persons died in traffic accidents in the first nine months of 1937. This is a nine per cent increase over the same period last year. The figure is appalling, but in spite of that fact the Council finds "favorable aspects" of the situation.

There are indications that the Nation-wide campaign for safety is beginning to produce results. In the last two months of the three-quarter period no increase in deaths over 1936 was recorded. In September the national total was 3550, a drop of ten per cent from August.

These results were achieved in spite of a ten per cent increase in motor traffic. In the first quarter of 1937, the increase in deaths over 1936 was twenty-four per cent, while for the second and third quarters it was only four per cent. In the nine months, sixty-six cities had a perfect record of no deaths from traffic accidents, while among cities with more than 500,000 population, Milwaukee was safest, with only two fatalities. Pittsburgh and Boston showed reductions from last year.

In this connection it will be interesting to observe the effect of the coming addition of 500 men to the motor police force in Pennsylvania and the augmenting of the white-car fleet. The new policemen will begin patrolling the highways early next year. In Pennsylvania more than 2150 have been killed and almost 50,000 injured this year. With 1600 policemen, it should be feasible to study records and concentrate safety drives on points shown to be most dangerous.

It is most depressing to read of the great number of men, women and children killed on the highways, but when it is accompanied with the reassurance that the slaughter is being checked there is hope of great reductions in the number of traffic victims.

SANTA'S PREPARATIONS

The Christmas toy business in the United States will total $230,000,000 this year, according to statistics released by toy manufacturers in New York City. This is exclusive of last-minute emergency orders, and averages about $10 per child.

These are gratifying figures, and no nation in the world will be able to duplicate them, but efforts should be begun now to double them next year. Four dollars worth of toys is not enough for any child. Most persons know at least one young 'un who can make scrap out of four bucks worth of toys in less time than it takes to say Jack.

And, if the average is four dollars, there will be many, many disappointed children on Christmas day whose gifts from Santa will be of microscopic value. So it can readily be seen that doubling the toy business next year would not be extravagant but a step in the right direction.

But only a step. Who is there that cannot remember having his heart set on a pony, automobile and bicycle, all in one Christmas, when he was about eight years old? Toys like those run into money, and it is high time steps are taken to distribute them more lavishly than Santa has been doing.

Success story: He lost money on the farm. So he moved to town and got rich so he could lose money on a farm.

Continuous support from Lower Bucks citizens makes it possible to give more boys and young men the Boy Scouts of America program."

The Scouting Maintenance Campaign tabulations by Paul V. Forster indicate that the Lower Bucks District soliciting is 60% completed. The importance of everyone giving was stressed by both Mr. Forster and Walter W. Pitzonka, Bristol and Edgely are making good progress. Croydon, Newportville, Cornwallis and Andalusia are partly solicited. Contributions both large and small are needed. The Council will be able to do as much work as it has funds to go forward.

Campaign leadership on the part of Dr. J. J. Willaman, Harold W. Thompson, P. E. Rohlfus, and many members of the Bristol Exchange Club received the appreciation for what they have been doing by the remarks of Messrs. Forster and Pitzonka. Clyde Nash, Edgely; A. B. Stiles, Croydon; Benjamin Turner, Cornwallis; Jesse Wendkos, Andalusia; and Fred Lennig along the Delaware River section were thanked for their leadership of groups of solicitors.

A monster Scouting Exposition to be held in three centers of the county during May, 1938, was presented by Paul V. Forster. The exposition will be at Bristol, Quakertown and Doylestown. It is going to be an opportunity for the public to see Scouting in action. All units will participate in tableaux, dramatizations, and pageants. Ronald Swain spoke of the annual Camporee at Bowman's Hill with a special feature that will be of interest to parents as a part of the 1938 program. Co-operative plans have been developed with the Bucks County Humane Club in the staging of school assembly presentations from suggestions submitted by William Wainman.

Hand signals to replace whistles in Cub Leadership were outlined by Cubmaster Joseph Kish. Suggestions were also given of a Cub Graduation Ceremony. American Red Cross Life-Saving and First-Aid Courses are being arranged by the Health and Safety Committee from the report by David Neill, District Commissioner Herbert A. Pettit, Sr., spoke of the new advancement procedure for Second Class Scouts, and the need for a formal inspection plan for Neighborhood Commissioners. Skipper Fred Herman announced that the Bristol Seascout Ship will entertain the other ships of the council at an indoor table championship on Saturday evening, November 20th.

From suggestions given by Field Commissioner A. B. Stiles, Neighborhood Commissioner David Neill and William Wainman and Assistant Scoutmaster Allen Lebo, Jr., the unit committees are being asked to return to a monthly meeting basis excepting the months of July and August. Members of the committees are going to be urged to make a weekly visit so that each committee member will attend his unit once each month.

general purposes, a considerable part of which has been wasted.

THE IMMENSE weight of indirect taxes bears today more heavily upon the poor than it ever has before, and the country distinctly is not on its feet. On the contrary, the present flat state of business threatens a disaster that has alarmed every Administration adviser and brought the President to a point where his protestations concerning the Federal finances have a ring of sincerity they heretofore have lacked. Word has gone down the line from him that the pump-priming days are over, that in the future every appropriation must carry its liquidating tax, that the equilibrium of the Federal Treasury must be regained—and without delay.

IT IS ALL very reassuring but it will be much more solidly so if these earnest expressions are followed by equally earnest action. It is the quality of what he does along these lines rather than what he says by which the President will be judged in the next few months. The only way in which he can make any progress toward a restoration of national solvency is by taking two steps, concededly unpopular with the large groups in which he has his greatest political strength. One of these steps is the reduction of expenses, the other the increase in taxes.

NO PRESIDENT can do either without losing popularity among the classes affected, but this President, far more than any other, has built himself up politically by posing as the national Santa Claus, lavishly distributing billions for the benefit of the poor; at the same time promulgating the idea that the taxes came out of the wealthy. The point has been reached now where he can no longer continue doing either without extreme danger to everybody. The high cost of living daily demonstrates the utter fallacy of the notion that the rich pay the bill and the poor ride free. Yet, to cut off the flow of funds and increase the number of taxpayers is intensely repugnant to a leader such as Mr. Roosevelt, who has gone so far in the other direction and convinced so many people that there was no limit to the Government largess and no reason to worry while the New Deal prevailed.

TO REVERSE himself now may make him less popular with the classes he has taught to think that the Government must take care of them, and Mr. Roosevelt dearly loves to be popular. The argument is that if he puts his full weight back of his words, cuts and taxes as he must if he wants to achieve a balance, it will mean that he has put politics and personal ambition out of his head and is free to do what he knows ought to be done with all his might. And if he does not go the limit for economy and taxation, if he is perfunctory, as he was in his opposition to the soldier bonus, if he does not really fight to get us back on an even keel, it will be a sure sign that he has not dismissed politics and that he is thinking in terms of 1940.

OF COURSE, if he now puts all thought of politics and popularity from him and hews to the line, his ultimate place in history will be very much higher than if he fails to exert himself for fear of losing popularity. It is difficult for a man in his position to be clear-headed about himself, but one would think he had at least some friends who could tell him convincingly that the chances of anyone having a third term as President in this country are negligible, but the sure way to make them non-existent is to plan and play for one. No President is smart enough to do that without its being smelt. And one whiff is enough.

"Beauty's A Charm" by HARRIET HINSDALE

CHAPTER XXV
So once again Lucy Lee Carter made the headlines, even though she was not aware of it.

"Screen Beauty Injured," "Beauty Wither Hurt," "Prize Beauty Dying."

For a day she even crowded Bruce Loring a little on the front page, but only for a day. Then he came back stronger than ever.

"No Word From Loring," "Star Still Missing," "Loring Plane Unreported," "Search on for Star."

With characteristic cynicism Don Ames bemoaned the fact that Lucy Lee's accident, if it had to happen, could not have occurred at a more propitious time.

"What a rotten break for the P.I. gal," he remarked to Wakefield Carter as their car hastened north toward the town where Lucy Lee was in hospital. "Nobody is sorer than I am about what's happened. Mr. Carter, but it burns me up to think how much more space she would be getting if this Loring story hadn't broke right now. Well, that's the way it goes."

"Mr. Ames," Wakefield Carter responded with dignity, "there is only one thing which matters. My daughter's complete recovery."

When the news of the accident was brought to him, Carter had sobered as suddenly as a man plunged into an icy bath. His fiercest dignity had returned to a large degree with the advent of responsibility. He was no longer merely a playboy and burdensome adjunct to his daughter's career, but for the moment at least, once more head of the family.

Whenever Lucy Lee resumed from her stupor she had only one question—"Is there any news of Clyde?"

When told that no word if the missing flier had been received, she closed her eyes and lapsed into unconsciousness again. It appeared that Lucy Lee was slipping away, but before doctors brought her back.

"Why don't they let me alone?" she moaned. "I don't want to live. I want to die."

There is no sensation radically wrong here," the doctor told Wakefield Carter. "I've not only to her physical condition, which is admittedly very serious, but to the mental state. The child has no desire to live." He kept glancing at Lucy Lee, as if he were waiting for her to wake up.

"Have you any idea why this should be so? Who is this Clyde for whom she's dying?"

"A friend. An old friend she has known all her life. From our home town. Doctor Allen. A boy named Clyde Dixon."

"Were they sweethearts? Had they quarreled?"

"Why no, Doctor. They agreed to marry in a perfectly friendly fashion. That was several months ago and I am certain Lucy Lee was not unduly distressed over the matter. At least, she certainly didn't regret it. As you properly brought up young girl would."

"Nevertheless I maintain there is a mental condition which is a grave factor in the situation," Mr. Carter. And it is my opinion Dr. Hale will agree with me."

In telling to the ledge Lucy Lee had struck with full weight upon her back across a rocky outcropping, causing the fracture. Only an operation could determine whether or not there had been a bruising or lesion of the spinal cord itself.

The operation was to be performed by the famous Dr. Hale, and it was the present duty of Dr. Allen to maintain the patient in as favorable a condition as possible for the coming ordeal.

Even Don Ames forgot the publicity angle and became merely humanly concerned for Lucy Lee's recovery.

"You don't mean she might pass out on us before this other man gets here, Doc? I didn't think she was in that bad shape, from what you told us over the telephone."

"I did not believe so myself at that time, Mr. Ames. But frankly, the case appears a great deal more serious than at first."

"But, my God—"

"However, we must hope for the best. With Dr. Hale operating, she will have every chance in the world. Every chance. He is one of the finest surgeons on the Pacific Coast. None better. But I wish we could find the answer to the mental condition."

"You mean her worrying about this guy Clyde Dixon?"

"That—and whatever lies back of it."

Dr. Hale arrived, made his examination and concurred in the opinion of his less famous colleague. An immediate operation was imperative, with the outcome uncertain and more than normally complicated by the patient's lack of response to stimuli. Wakefield Carter waited with white face and taut nerves for the verdict, and Don Ames kept vigil with him.

But Lucy Lee did not die. The operation was pronounced entirely successful. Within two weeks it should be possible to take her home in an invalid coach, without any ill effects. True, she would have to remain in a plaster cast for some little time longer in order to give the injured vertebra no shocks while healing. But Lucy Lee could consider herself practically well right now.

Flowers came from the studio, with a note on the stationery of the Supreme Pictures Corporation and signed by the President, per his secretary. The box of flowers was enormous and for a few days Lucy Lee's room was a bower of roses, delphiniums and tall pink gladioli.

There were other baskets and boxes of flowers, telegrams from several people, numerous telephone calls of inquiry. For two weeks the studio called up every day but when the reports continued favorable, the calls became less frequent and finally ceased. The publicity office, which had been sending out frequent bulletins as to her progress, announced that her complete recovery was assured. Most of the papers printed this, but several did not. The story had run down, in spite of Don Ames' efforts to keep it going.

One day there came a floral basket which could only be described as magnificent. The nurse gave positively coquettish as she placed it on a table where Lucy Lee's eyes might rest on it without the effort of moving her head. She brought the tiny white envelope to the bed with an arch smile.

"He must care an awful lot, dearie. Why, these flowers never cost a cent less than fifty dollars. Orchids and everything!"

"Lucy Lee opened the envelope, glanced at the card it contained and turned her eyes away.

"Nurse, would you mind giving the flowers to the patients in the wards? I—I don't think I want to have them in the room. Thank you."

The card slipped from her thin white fingers to the floor and the nurse stopped to recover it. She saw but three words: "Forgive me, Neville."

Quietly she took the basket out. For the first time in the history of the hospital there were orchids that day beside the beds of ward patients.

What was there to forgive, Lucy Lee thought wearily. It was all so important now. She didn't blame Neville. Probably he couldn't help being the sort of person he was. And he had warned her.

She remembered the time in Atlantic City when he had said: "Don't trust me, my dear. Every woman who has done that, has regretted it."

Pearl was right. She had been just too dumb to understand. And as for Pearl—well, she only hoped she would never see her again. Not so much on her own account but because of Daddy Carter.

The papers continued to be filled with stories of the Bruce Loring airplane disaster. At the end of two weeks without any word, hope for the safety of the two men was definitely abandoned.

There appeared to be little doubt that the bodies of both Bruce Loring and Clyde Dixon lay on some bleak Mexican mountainside, buried beneath the wreckage of the new plane of which they had been so proud and so confident.

Don Ames, calculating the amount of space devoted to the story all over the world, was inconsolable. Not so much because of the disaster, although he admitted it was a tough break for both of the boys, but because neither one of them was alive to cash in on the ballyhoo!

To all appearance Bruce Loring and his companion had vanished as effectively as though instead of heading their plane for Mexico they had sent it straight through the ether to the shores of some far planet, with no possible hope of return. Another chapter had been written in the annals of unsolved mysteries of the air.

Within a short time it was possible for Lucy Lee to return to Hollywood in an invalid coach. Dr. Hale pronounced her condition excellent, ordered several weeks more in bed, and then the patient was to begin walking by slow and easy degrees.

"That's swell," Don Ames remarked. "We'll send out a bulletin to the waiting world."

Lucy Lee's bed had been moved near the French doors opening on a balcony toward the view over the city and Ames was lounging in an easy chair beside it, a few days after her return.

"The waiting world has forgotten all about me," Lucy Lee replied without rancor. "It doesn't care whether I'm alive or dead."

"Sure it doesn't," the publicity man assented cheerfully. "Who said it did? But what difference does that make? It's our business to make it think it cares. The poor, dear, stupid public hasn't got a real, honest-to-God original thought in its collective skull, baby. We just have to feed it what it fondly imagines are thoughts."

"I was reading in Drusilla's column this morning that Neville Preston's company is back from the mountains," Lucy Lee answered slowly, her mind turning away from herself. "I suppose Pearl has gone to a hotel. She sent for her clothes yesterday."

TWO BOWLING EXPERTS TO ROLL EXPOSITION GAMES

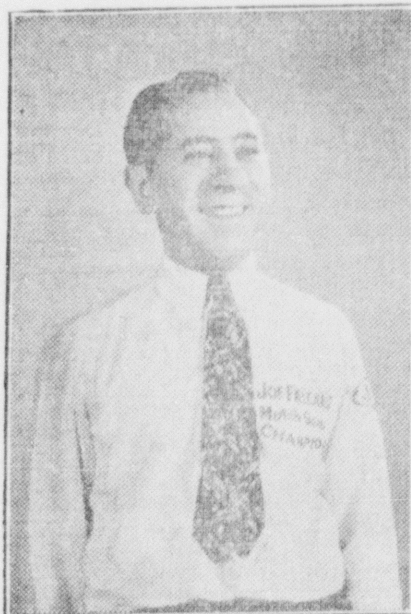

Joe Falcaro and Gene Gagliardi To Be at Bristol Recreation Center

TOMORROW NIGHT

Two of bowling's foremost exponents, Joe Falcaro, unbeaten world's match game champion, and Gene Gagliardi, 1936-37 A. B. C. singles champion will roll an exhibition match tomorrow night at the Bristol Recreation Center at 7:30 o'clock.

Falcaro, known to the keeling fraternity as "Chesty Joe" has been maintaining averages of 230 to 250 in all of his recent matches. He has won many prizes and held more bowling titles than any other kegger, and any time you hear or read of a new bowling record being compiled, you may reasonably assume that the fine Italian hand of Joe Falcaro was responsible for same.

BOWLING EXPERT

He has chalked up a world's record of 41 perfect games and can be depended upon to roll in his very best form when the big money is down.

Joe became interested in bowling when, as a youngster, he served as a pin boy in a Brooklyn center. He soon became so proficient in belting the maples that his army of backers were winning huge sums of money on his prowess. Like Walter Hagen of golf fame he rose to his greatest height when "the pressure was on" and proved himself one of the greatest money bowlers of all time by clinging to the title of world's undefeated match game champion over a period of years.

Gagliardi, a Mount Vernon pin topper, won the 1936-1937 singles championship at the American Bowling Congress tournament in New York City last spring when he hit the maples for a 749 triple. He combined games of 266, 277 and 296 to make his record high triple mark in the A. B. C.

After skyrocketing into national prominence as a top notch bowler, Gene, who is a barber by profession, dropped his comb and shears and started bowling for a living.

This is his first nationwide tour but since joining Falcaro three weeks ago he has turned in some exceptionally high games. The Mount Vernon sensation has an average of 230 for the games he has bowled during the past three weeks.

In addition to their matches, Falcaro and Gagliardi will present a brand new program of trick shots. Making two strikes with one ball is one of their features.

Another innovation in trick play is an example of perfect timing and control when they perform as a team. During this masterly bit of showmanship they successfully accomplish feats as a duo, that would be considered as an outstanding applause getter by any single exhibition pin wielder in the public eye today.

Red Cross Has Aided Disabled War "Vets" serious economic problems, the Red Cross volunteered to assist them in filing legitimate claims with the Government. The families of those men who never returned were likewise taken under the wing of the Red Cross.

The work of filing claims and securing compensation was, however, by no means finished in the years immediately following the war. Veterans are continually finding that they suffer ill effects from old injuries as is witnessed by the chapter report showing that 4,888 veteran cases were handled last year.

A process of evolution during the depression caused the work of the Home Service section to be expanded to relieve the plight of many thousands of civilians.

The files of the chapter are filled with touching testimonials of gratitude from families who have been gently guided out of the morass of social and economic despondency. Nearly all of them are now on the road to independence with their heads up and thanks in their hearts to the home service of the Red Cross.

RESERVATIONS ASKED

It is announced by Franklin Silber, 292 Jefferson avenue, that reservations and money for those desiring to attend the reunion of the class of 1935, Bristol high school, must be given him by Saturday. The affair will be held in Philadelphia on November 26th.

SLAM-BANG BOUT BOOKED FOR ARENA

TRENTON, Nov. 10 — A slam-bang wrestling card is on tap at the Trenton Arena tonight when Promoter Johnny Ipp presents his weekly mat card. "Irish" Jack Kennedy, the season's most popular grappler matman, will seek to extend his winning streak at the expense of Rebel Rob Russell, rowdy Southerner. This will be a one fall, one hour time limit contest.

Kennedy scored an exceptionally popular victory when he won the verdict over Karl Davis and reversed the decision that Davis scored the week prior.

Russell has won four Arena combats, defeating Sammy Menacher, Mayes McLain, Al Mercier and Sid Westrich. This bout figures to be one of the finest duels ever contested here.

Chief Little Wolf, sensational Navajo Indian and inventor of the Indian "death-lock," will appear in a special bout opposed to Jimmy Coffield, Kansas City rowdy.

Bill Sledge, popular Texan, will vie with Casey Berger, highly-touted Western newcomer, in another supporting match.

Jack Holland, handsome Californian, who has not lost a local match, will face Joe Maynard, rough and tumble Chicagoan, and Bobby Roberts, the Canadian flash, will tangle with Jack Vincent, Linden, N. J. veteran.

The first bout will start at 8:30 p. m.

Two Speakers Address The Woman's Temperance Union

A report of the Pennsylvania Woman's Christian Temperance Union convention, held at Greensburg, was given to members of Bristol W. C. T. U., meeting at the home of Miss Martha C. Hughes, 601 Radcliffe street, last evening, the group also listening during the evening to an address by Miss Marian Longshore, Langhorne.

Mrs. Harry H. Headley presided with devotional service being conducted by Mrs. Ada B. Sands, who read from Paul's admonition to the Romans "The day is far spent and the night is at hand; therefore let us cast away the works of darkness."

Owing to serious illness of the recording secretary, Mrs. John R. Hendricks, minutes were read by Miss Laura Ellis, secretary pro tem. A vocal duet was given by Mrs. Elwood Dyer and Mrs. Sands; and the members sang the hymn "Master the Tempest is Hailing."

Miss Jane Rogers, a member of Bristol union, delegate to the recent state convention at Greensburg, told of the sessions, mentioning high lights of addresses of Mrs. Ella B. Black, state president; Mrs. Ida B. Smith, national president; Mrs. Ella Boole, world president; Bishop Hughes of the Methodist Church, and others.

That the time to train to avoid the electric chair is in the high chair, was one thought given at the meeting. "A note of hopefulness prevailed that rejection would soon obliterate the ignominious experiment of repeal," was the report of one of the officers.

Miss Mary J. Haines introduced Miss Marian Longshore, Langhorne, who discussed the serious problems of the United States' attitude toward warring nations, in view of serious economic complications. She quoted Sumner Wells, assistant secretary of state, who said: "The strongest argument against war is the force of public opinion freely expressed."

At Miss Longshore's suggestion the corresponding secretary, Miss Marie Watson, was directed by the union to write President Roosevelt urging the invocation of the neutrality act.

BRISTOL-BURLINGTON GAME TO BE STAGED HERE

Annual Grid Battle To Take Place Saturday Afternoon On High School Field

KICK-OFF TO BE AT 2.15

Saturday afternoon at 2.15 the football team of Burlington high school will invade Bristol and attempt to get possession of that famous little brown jug from the Bristol high school eleven. The jug, now in possession of Bristol, is highly valued by both teams. Burlington lost possession of it in 1933.

The Fathers Association is boosting the game for Saturday and the contest is to be the banner grid event of the year. It will be the one big game played at home this season.

Large buttons done in gray and maroon with a picture of a little brown jug and the lettering "Beat Burlington" are being sold by the Fathers Association, as a means of advertising the game and building up publicity.

It is expected that the banner crowd of the season will attend the game Saturday and the Fathers Association is pleading for the support of the entire School team. "Bristol Can Beat Burlington" if the public will support the team and attend the game," says the spokesman for the Fathers Association.

Political Dynamite In Special Sessions

had their origin in the extra session of May, 1937.

"It was remembered also that the unpopularity which attached to the Presidency of Mr. Madison was connected with the two extra sessions which his timid administration was perhaps too ready to assemble. So deeply was hostility to extra sessions implanted in the minds of political leaders by the misfortunes of Adams and Madison that another was not called for a quarter of a century."

"In September, 1937, Mr. Van Buren inaugurated the ill fortune of his administration by assembling Congress three months in advance of the regular session. John Tyler in turn never recovered from the dissensions and disasters of the extra session of May 1841—though it was precipitated upon him by a call issued by President Harrison."

In the coming session, Congress will debate wage-hours, farm and reorganization legislation—all explosive subjects in Congress.

Famous special sessions of modern times, which have created difficulties for the party in power include:

Special session called by President Grover Cleveland to repeal silver-purchasing clause, which split the Democratic party and gave President William McKinley victory for the Republicans in 1896.

Special session called by President Wilson, which resulted in American entrance into the World War in 1917, and which was followed by Republicans winning control of Congress.

Two special sessions called by President Taft during which Congress battled over the Payne-Aldrich tariff and Canadian reciprocity, which were followed by a split in the Republican party and the election of President Woodrow Wilson.

The Teapot Dome scandal which wrecked the Harding administration came to light during a special session.

President Hoover called a special session in 1929 to enact a farm program, just as President Roosevelt is seeking crop control. The session, however, became chiefly involved in a battle over the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill. The session, which opened on April 15, continued until November 22, with the tariff bill's enactment being postponed until the regular session.

The great stock market crash occurred while Congress was in session. Many Republicans believe that the Hoover special session actually brought on the downfall of the party.

President Roosevelt called a special session of Congress after he entered office on March 4, 1933. Congress convened on March 9 but completed its business by June 15, securely under the domination of the president. During this session historic gold and banking legislation and the economy act were enacted.

With Congress convening on November 15, it is expected that the extra session will merge into the regular session in January. Whatever quarrels that develop in the special session will be carried over into the next.

Unsettled Conditions Have Confused Youth

capped. We wish now to consider some of the difficulties which face the American youth today.

The most perplexing problem is the use of leisure time. In the Colonial days their time was organized by the church and home. There was much work to do in the home. The men and boys worked in the fields or at some other trade, while the women and girls spent the summer making candles, spinning, and preserving food to store up for the cold winter months. Co-operation between the parents was necessary. The children played different kinds of games that were something like today's games. They had cock fights, soccer, and ping-pong. The children spent little time in school and what little education they got they had to work for.

Today life is quite different. Most of the interest centers outside the home. Both adults and children have a great deal of spare time on their hands. Labor saving machinery, forced unemployment and short hours of labor have caused the problem of leisure activities. When the children don't know what to do, they ask mother for a dime to go to the movies or else run around streets with other boys and girls learning all the rough talk and slang of the neighborhood. We need creative recreation for the betterment of the children. There should be better games for the children to play.

The problem of unemployment is another trial to youth. Thousands of young people are now out of school each year, and there are not enough jobs to go around. They will want to get married, but they can't because they aren't making enough money to support a family. This is one way Fascism and Communism is caused. The youth gets a bitter outlook on life because of these trials. He doesn't learn to live respectably because he doesn't have the money and he had no occupation to hold in interest and inspire his ambition. He gets radical ideas in his head and first thing you know he has landed in jail with a stretch of about five to twenty years in the penitentiary and possibly his whole life ruined all because he had too much leisure time. The young people should be given something to do and must be kept at it.

There is also the problem of choosing their vocation for their life's work. Many young people don't know what course to take in school because they don't know what vocation they will be best suited for. If they choose the wrong course in school, they might not be able to get as good a job later as they could have gotten if they had taken the right course in school. They also have trouble in finding a job. Manufacturing and other trades are changing so rapidly that by the time one gets out of school he doesn't know enough about the work to be really good in it. New machines are being invented all the time to save more time, and not many people are needed to work them. Many people get out of jobs because of new machines being put in that don't require as many people as the old ones did. This is one reason so many people have so much leisure time.

There are other things which trouble the youth of today. There are wars being fought all the time. America isn't out of the depression that it got itself into in the World War. The youth of today must make the world safe for democracy without any kind of warfare while doing it. They must settle problems peaceably instead of going to war to fight them out. They must put out the Fascists and Communists that are making trouble for the whole world. These alien forces will succeed if we don't stop them. The American youth have great problems to face today. They need understanding, courage, and character, if these problems are to be solved in the right way.
